There are Supplemental Instruction (SI) sessions available for this course. These study sessions are open to anyone enrolled in this course who would like to stay current with the course material and understand the material better. Attendance at these sessions is voluntary, but extremely beneficial for those who attend weekly. Students who attend these interactive sessions will find themselves working with peers as they compare notes, demonstrate and discuss pertinent problems and concepts, and share study and test-taking strategies. Students are asked to arrive with lecture notes, and questions to these informal, peer-led study sessions. Information about times, days and location of SI sessions will be provided by your SI leader during the first two weeks of classes.
